The Child Trauma Research Program (CTRP) is nationally recognized for its leadership in developing effective, family-centered interventions for children aged birth through five who experience traumatic events such as violence in the home, death of a loved one, life-threatening accidents, illnesses, or disasters.

Our team of multi-cultural, multi-lingual staff is dedicated to helping young children and families who experience traumatic events. We develop and evaluate effective treatment models, provide training across settings and disciplines, and offer direct service to children and their families.

CTRP trains clinicians in Child-Parent Psychotherapy across the nation:
